Design

You can design your kitchen yourself using our design guide in this brochure. This costs just $149 incl GST.

Measure your room. Twice!

Getting your correct room measurements is important - it can be the difference between a kitchen that fits and one that doesn't. But we can help you with the guide below or even arrange a professional measure.

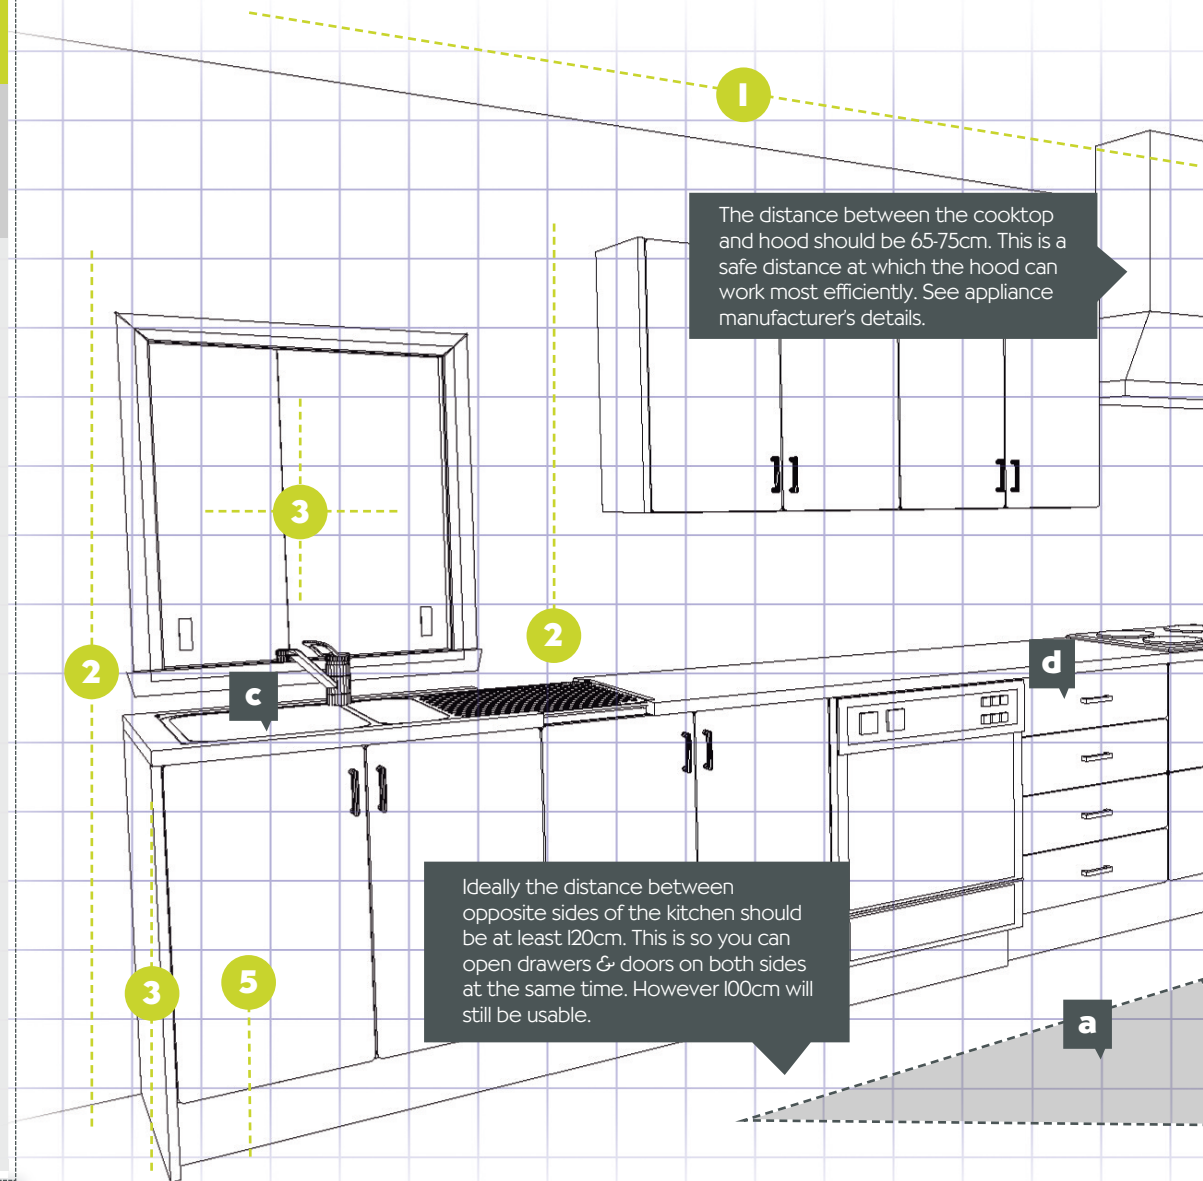

1 To start, measure the outline of the room by measuring the walls, between each corner.

2 Measure anything that sticks out such as pillars, other shallow walls, pipes etc. Also measure the floor to ceiling and include any bulkhead dimensions. Mark them all on your drawing.

3 Then measure and draw up any window or door. Include the widths and heights and also depths of sills or reveals. Very importantly, make a note of the height of the window from the floor. This will indicate if your benchtop is also your windowsill.

4 Check the position of power outlets, lights switches, aircon or security switches. Measure the distance from a corner and mark it clearly on your drawing. If you are prepared to have these moved, make a note of where they could go.

5 Last but not least, measure and mark where your water supply comes in and very importantly, where the waste is. If the waste pipe goes out of the wall or goes straight into the floor, you will need to know, especially if you are going to include a dishwasher.

If you would like a professional site survey for just $149, ask about our Installation Partners who can measure your kitchen and if you want, install it too.

Planning your kitchen

What should you think about?

Designing your own kitchen can be daunting. That's why we've put some top tips here, for you to consider. After all, it can be difficult enough cooking the meal, without the added hassle of a design that doesn't work well!

If possible, imagine a triangle between your cook top, fridge and sink. Building your kitchen around this will get some order of flow into the room.

Whenever possible, design at least 150mm of benchtop either side of your cooktop the more the better, especially for when you are serving straight from the pan onto the plate. For this you would need about 300mm.

Always allow enough space for the correct sink. In tight areas where space is limited, you can use mobile drainers that cover the sink. This can sometimes be used as additional benchtop. But give it enough distance from the cook top.

Allow up to 920mm from the floor to the top of benchtop. This gives you a good working height. Then allow 458mm between the benchtop and the underside of your wall cabinets. The total height with our Express Range will be approx. 2100mm to the top of a Wall or Tall cabinet. (That's why it's important to check your ceiling and bulkhead heights!)

If you aren't going to be replacing your floor covering, check the distance from the wall to the front of your existing kickboard. It will need to be the same or less than your new kitchen – otherwise a deeper benchtop will be required and the cabinets must be set off the wall.

Lastly, think about whether you need any doors to open with a left hinge or a right hinge. That will help to make the kitchen work properly without the problems of having awkward access to that all important saucepan!

Remember - for just $95 we can also offer a design service for you in-house, from exact measurements you supply. Also, if you need a different solution, ask to see our other ranges where cabinets are made to measure, site surveys are carried out by us and installation is part of our full project management service.
